Avrumi Mashinsky is an abstract painter. He was born and lives in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

While at high school, Avrumi joined a theater set design group. There he learned painting techniques. After finishing high school, he enrolled at the Rutgers University, where he graduated and holds a BA in Fine Arts.

After graduating, he enrolled at an art group in his city and started relating with other artists. There he discovered some artworks from Cubism and Orphist (a branch of Cubism), which have had a great influence on his style.

Avrumi Mashinsky has been researching the theories on color for many years. The artist constantly seeks pictorial harmony by arranging colors on the canvas. As an abstract painter, Mashinsky is also known for his multiple representations of the Manhattan Skyline. This motif followed all the artistic languages of the artist, neo-impressionist, cubist and finally his own simultainist method.

Today, his works are part of the collections of the largest public institutions around the world, such as the Guggenheim New York.
