A photographer and business owner based in San Ramon, California, Brooke Bowers Waskey delivers high quality portraiture services to clients who wish to create unforgettable images of their families and children as they reach milestones such as high school graduation. Her interest in photography began while a student at Los Altos High School, which named her photography art student of the month several times. Later, Brooke Bowers Waskey enrolled at the Brooks Institute of Photography, where she studied sports photography.

Beyond her commitment to photography, Brooke Waskey's professional background includes a period in the real estate field as an employee with Alain Pinel Realtors in Los Altos and Walnut Creek, California. While there, she facilitated the escrow process for clients among the region's most productive real estate professionals. She has also worked for Lululemon in her capacity as product educator, a position that required she conduct community outreach on behalf of the brand.

In addition to her client-driven photography, she produces fine art photography according to her own taste. One of these images, taken of an abandoned ship, was honored with an award.
